

Granbury Square Plaza, a new landmark destination to shop, dine, work and play on the Historic Granbury Square

Granbury Square Plaza, located at the corner of Pearl and Crockett on the historic Granbury Square, is a new landmark destination for upscale retail, boutiques, shops, studios, office suites and dining. Developers Ken Hackett and Richard Page, both Granbury residents, acquired the old First United Methodist Church with a vision to create an environment rich in history, in a setting that offers unique amenities and services that both visitors and tenants will appreciate.

According to Hackett, "The development team utilized the talents of Shelby Miller, of Granbury, and historical photographs from the church site were used for architectural inspiration when designing the mission-style façade for Granbury Square Plaza. In renovating and creating the 40,000-square-foot retail and office plaza, we incorporated a covered pavilion and events plaza with a stage for private and civic groups, and landscaped plazas with fountains and relaxing public areas for a pleasurable experience for guests and tenants. We also are providing large, well-lit, head-in parking areas, and we are fortunate that the trolley stops at our doorstep."

"Granbury Square Plaza represents a new chapter in Granbury Square's history," adds Hackett. "Our signature bell tower beckons visitors to a wide array of retail, business and dining choices, and we are pleased to announce that several specialty retailers will open new establishments, including A Woman's Place, Granbury's Best/Jams & Jellies, and G & M Trading Post. Granbury continues to be one of the bright spots in the Texas economy, and we are meeting daily with new retail, restaurant and office prospects. Not only does Granbury Square Plaza offer businesses competitive pricing and flexible lease space, it provides other unique advantages, including a prominent address on the square; excellent signage and visibility; and a diverse tenant mix for cross marketing. We also have integrated state-of-the-art technology for controlled, after-hour card access; intrusion alarm, fire and sprinkler systems; and a 20-channel DVD camera system."

For information and leasing, contact Ken Hackett at 817.279.8080 or visit www.GranburySquarePlaza.com.